

OLYMPIC FLAG MIX-UP

This lesson will introduce students to the history of the Olympic Opening Ceremonies and the details that go into them.

CONTEXT

The Olympic Opening Ceremonies are steeped in historic tradition and as they have evolved over the years, one thing never changes: the order in which the countries march in the Parade of Nations. After students have been introduced to the Olympic Opening Ceremonies using the attached materials, students will work in groups to correctly arrange the flags in the orders they would have been presented at the 1932 and 1980 Olympic Winter Games in Lake Placid.

AIMS & OBJECTIVES

Students will be able to:

1. Gather, interpret, and use evidence.
2. Use chronological reasoning and causation.
3. Utilize geographic reasoning.

MATERIALS

Primary Sources:

Photographs from the LPOM collection.

Secondary Sources:

World Map

PROCEDURE

- Introduce students to the Opening Ceremonies by using the provided information sheets. Explain that countries march into the Opening Ceremony in alphabetical order with the exceptions being Greece entering first since they are the founders of the Ancient Games and the host country entering last.
- Split students into groups with pre-shuffled flags from either the 1932 or 1980 Games.
- Using the labels as clues, have students arrange the flags in the order that the countries would have marched in during the Parade of Nations by using the information that they learned and the primary sources provided.

EXTENSION ACTIVITY

As an extension activity, have students research an Olympic host country that participated in either the 1932 or 1980 Olympic Winter Games. Use the "Olympic Host Country Research" worksheet to guide students through the activity.

As the Great Depression grips the world, 252 athletes from 17 nations overcome economic hardships and arrive in Lake Placid. The Opening Ceremony is held in the Olympic Stadium, also known as the Speed Skating Oval. Many dignitaries were in attendance: members from the International Olympic Committee (IOC), New York State Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, American Olympic Association President Avery Brundage, and Lake Placid Olympic Committee President Godfrey Dewey.

The Opening Ceremony for the 1932 Olympic Winter Games proves to be a spectacular event despite being held at the height of the Great Depression. The flags of the 17 participating nations flew around the stadium, all the buildings in town itself was decorated with colorful bunting, and there was a grand bandstand for the musicians.

As the American national anthem ends, the Parade of Nations begins. The teams march in alphabetical order with a designated flag bearer from each country proudly waving their nation's flag. For Team USA, bobsledder Billy Fiske receives the honor of being a flag bearer. In front of each flag bearer is a boy scout with a placard to clearly indicate the name of the national delegation.

As the Parade of Nations comes to a close, Governor Roosevelt officially opens the Games by stating "and so we are glad to welcome this nation, our sister nations, as guests of the American people and of the State of New York, and I proclaim open the III Olympic Winter Games, celebrating the Xth Olympiad of the modern era."

Jack Shea, U.S.A. speed skater and a native of Lake Placid, is selected to take the Olympic oath on top of the Victory Podium. The Opening Ceremony in its entirety took a little over half an hour and after a short break, the first event of the III Olympic Winter Games began with the first heat of the 500-meter speed skating race.

The hour-long Opening Ceremony features a trumpet and drum corps, a 600-member Olympic Orchestra and Concert, skaters, sky divers, hot air balloons, the cauldron lighting, and the Parade of Nations.

The teams march in alphabetical order with a designated flag bearer from each country proudly waving their nation's flag. For Team USA, figure skater Scott Hamilton is appointed the honor of carrying the nation's flag in the parade.

PARADE OF NATIONS

BRIEF HISTORY AND FACTS

1908

LONDON SUMMER GAMES

The first Parade of Nations takes places.

1924

1924 Olympic Winter Games: Chamonix, France

For the Parade of Nations at the first Olympic Winter Games in 1924, athletes marched with their equipment: skis, skates, luges, and bobsleighs.

1928

1928 Olympic Summer Games: Amsterdam, Netherlands

The tradition of the Greek delegation marching first is introduced - owing to the status of the founding country of the ancient Olympic Games.

1932

1932 Olympic Winter Games: Lake Placid, New York, U.S.A.

The first ever female flag-bearer was Mollie Phillips, a British figure skater. The 1932 Games were also the first time that winter athletes finally marched without their equipment.

Being selected a flag bearer is a very big honor. Olympic flag bearers are selected through a vote of a nation's team captains. However, team captains are not allowed to vote for their own sport.

A

Alphabetical order for the nations has always been used, but it depends on the language and spelling of the host nation. For example, at Mexico City in 1968, "United States" in Spanish is "Estados Unidos," so Team USA entered the stadium near the beginning of the parade.

Z

Exceptions: Greece always enters first and the host nation traditionally enters last.
